

Universal Technical Institute Announces HVACR Program at Lisle Campus

PHOENIX and LISLE, Ill., June 24, 2026 /PRNewswire/ -- Universal Technical Institute \(UTI\), the automotive/diesel, skilled trades, electrical, and energy education division of Universal Technical Institute, Inc., today announced the expansion of its HVACR program to its UTI-Lisle campus. The Lisle launch is part of the company's continued expansion of HVACR training to meet growing workforce demand nationwide.

The nine-month HVACR diploma program is now offered at UTI campuses located in California, Arizona, Texas, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, North Carolina, and Florida. Additionally, UTI's Atlanta campus, scheduled to open in Summer 2026, will offer the HVACR program, which provides hands-on training designed to prepare students for entry-level roles in residential and commercial HVACR environments.

Coursework covers essential topics including troubleshooting, service, and installation of heating and air conditioning systems, as well as refrigeration systems used in light commercial applications.

"Expanding our HVACR programs is a strategic priority as employers across the country face ongoing technician needs," said UTI Division President Tracy Lorenz. "By increasing access to hands-on HVACR training—including at our Lisle campus—we're helping students prepare for essential careers while supporting industries that rely on skilled professionals every day."

"We're excited to bring HVACR training to Lisle and offer students another pathway into an in-demand career," said Roger Gomez, campus president of UTI Lisle. "This program reflects our commitment to helping prepare students to enter the workforce through hands-on, industry-aligned education."

The HVACR program expansion supports Universal Technical Institute, Inc.'s North Star Strategy, a multi-year initiative to address America's labor shortages. For more information about the strategy, visit investor.uti.edu.
